Why Dellicker?

Dellicker has been helping schools and municipalities implement secure I.T. solutions since 2005. Our team of professionals learned its tradecraft in the real world, with decades of military, government and private-sector experience. We know that cybersecurity is not just something to delegate to the I.T. staff. Instead, we help public organizations institutionalize threat management as a core operational function.

Cybersecurity Assessment

Before spending more time and money on new security measures, make sure you really know what you need. Cyber-attacks are not all the same and nobody can possibly protect 100 percent of their data. That's why a risk-based approach to cybersecurity is an absolute requirement.

Risk-Based Approach

A risk-based approach starts by recognizing that cybersecurity is not just an I.T. issue relegated to the technology staff. It is an institutional imperative that requires high-level engagement and executive oversight. The Dellicker team will help you identify what information in your organization is most important, understand which systems and processes are most vulnerable to cyber-attack and prioritize implementation of new policies, technologies and procedures to protect your data. We align our programming with the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) Cybersecurity Framework, updated to be applicable to K-12 schools and local governments. And, we employ state-of-the-art network scanning tools to immediately notify you of the most important vulnerabilities and show you how to fix time right away.

Make no mistake. Doing a comprehensive independent evaluation first is critical to your long-term success.
